what does DIY mean to you?

If there's one thing we talk about a lot at this magazine, it's DIY projects. DIYing makes a home feel extra special. It personalizes a space so it's truly one of a kind. Over the years the editors and I have defined DIY as do it yourself, design it yourself, decorate it yourself, and dream it yourself—and who knows? Maybe we'll think of more.

Sometimes DIYing means you gather up tools and materials to create from scratch. Or you start with something basic and customize it to look totally unique. (See the baskets on the cover? They used to be plain-Jane.) You can also take an old piece, like a chair from a flea market, and give it a fresh start with new fabric or paint...or fabric and paint. And have you ever decorated a room in your head for months—even years—then one day filled it up and brought it to life? That's a real DIY feat!

This issue is dedicated to DIYing in every form. As a token of affection for all of you who regularly grab a hammer, a paintbrush, or a glue gun and say, "I can do this," I rounded up some very lovely paint colors to inspire your next project. Happy (early) Valentine's Day!

Welcome to handmade heaven! Everywhere you turn in this place, there's something awesome to try.

Matt and Chelsea with, from left, twins Colin and Shire, 6, and Mason, 5

any people consider DIY projects cute and all but they can be seriously stylish too, as Chelsea Bieber has proven in her family's home. Most of the stuff in their Herndon, VA, split-level was either bought used and revived, purchased new and personalized, or dreamed up and built by Chelsea and her husband. Matt. She first discovered the world of DIY when she was on bed rest while pregnant with her twins, and the hobby evolved into an interior design biz she started with her sister-in-law Cate. "DIY grows your confidence in creating," Chelsea says. "Finishing one project gives you the boost you need to tackle the next." Her ideas are showcased around the house: cool wall stencils here, a genius nightstand update there. Happily, all of them are easy to copy. Take a look!

After living with this World Market table's dark finish for years, Chelsea sanded it down on a whim with an electric sander. Boom! New table.

For projects with lots of parts, plan ahead so you make only one trip to the store. It makes DIY jobs a lot easier!

- 3. Cut a piece of gold foil large enough to cover the section, and place it over the adhesive, shiny side up.
- 4. Put a sheet of parchment paper on top, and iron the section on medium heat for about 20 seconds. Let cool.
- 5. Pull back foil to reveal the design. Repeat for the remaining sections.

metallic spheres

- 1. Stick bamboo skewers into a smooth Styrofoam ball, starting near the middle. We used 3-inch skewers for the small sphere and 4-inch for the large. Continue adding skewers until the entire ball is filled, as shown. If a skewer falls out, secure it with hot glue.
- 2. Spray-paint the sphere gold. Do a few coats, rotating it to cover the skewers and the ball completely.

- 1. Set the lids of the containers aside. Cut a piece of leather to fit around each container so the ends are flush.
- 2. Wrap the leather around the container and adhere with double-sided tape on the top, bottom, and ends.
- 3. Make monkey fist knots for the lids (we used suede cord). For a step-by-step guide, go to hgtv.com/monkey-fist-knot.
- 4. Glue the monkey fist knots to the lids with strong glue, such as Krazy Glue. Replace the lids.

- 2. Cut out each circle, leaving a ½-inch border all around.
- 3. Center the printed image on top of a wood circle and adhere with decoupage medium. Let dry. Flip it over and trim the excess border with a crafts knife.

- 2. Turn the stand on its side and repeat to cover half of the base. Let dry. Repeat for the other half.

- 2. Weave the crafts stick under and over the wire bars of the chair's back, releasing the cord from the stick as you go. Continue going back and forth across the chair, nudging up the cord after each row to create even lines. When you've filled the desired amount of rows, cut the cord and tie the end to the side of the chair with a knot.
- 3. For large blocks of color, you'll need to reload the crafts stick with cord and repeat the above steps a few times. Continue until the back and seat are covered.

an updated brick fireplace

"Painting my dingy red brick fireplace perky pink took only about an hour and a half, and the payoff was instant. First I cleaned the brick with a damp cloth. Then I applied two layers of satin-finish paint in a dabbing motion—to get all the nooks and crannies—with a 2-inch nylon brush, waiting 15 minutes between coats. For the third, I just brushed on the paint."

—Jenika Kurtz Cuadra, J. Kurtz Design, Los Angeles, CA

a stenciled accent wall

"I love geometric wallpaper, but I find a stencil way easier. I bought one with 12 triangles from Olive Leaf Stencils on Etsy, then measured the wall so I could start in the middle—that way the pattern would be even on both sides. I secured the stencil with painter's tape and did one coat of dark teal with a roller, keeping the pressure light so paint didn't seep under the stencil's edges."

—Summer Wick, Cascade Vintage & Co. blog, Camas, WA

a refreshed wicker set

"I scored the wicker table and chairs on Craigslist for $150—a steal, except they were a dated and sad yellow. A preppy, glossy green gave them a much-needed modern twist. For a flawless finish, it's best to use a paint sprayer so color covers the intricate designs and goes on nice and smooth."

an ombréd vintage cabinet

"The rows of drawers in this metal filing cabinet really bring out the gradient effect. Choosing chalky paint meant I didn't need to prime first! I picked two lavenders and mixed them with white in cups, experimenting to create five distinct shades. This works with any color, and you can use a paint deck for inspiration."

jazzed-up cabinets

"Instead of blowing a bundle on new cabinets for this client's kitchen. I brought the sunshine with paint. Prep is everything when you redo stained cabinets—if you don't sand till they're supersmooth and then prime them, the paint could chip. A satin finish is easy to wipe down and also hides imperfections that glossy ones tend to highlight."

> -Amanda Louise Campbell, Amanda Louise Interiors, Greenville, SC

a color-blocked dresser

"This is a fun way to use up leftover paint. You can preplan the design, but I made mine up as I went along. Starting in the top right corner, I taped off a triangle, did two coats, and pulled up the tape while the paint was still wet, for clean edges, I left a corner of the wood dresser untouched for a peekaboo effect. Patience is key! I waited till each section was completely dry before taping off the next one. This project took a weekend, mostly spent waiting for paint to dry."

NOT BAD NOT SO KINDA PRETTY REALLY SUPER BAD! BAD!

how bad is it to wear perfume on a plane?

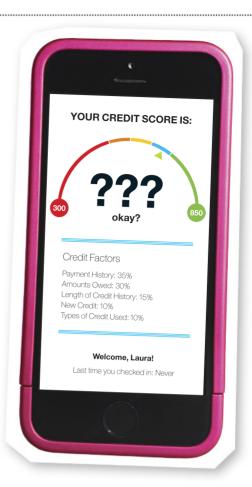

Skip the spritz when you're taking a flight. Perfume can be an irritant for passengers with and without allergies and may trigger sneezing, wheezing, shortness of breath, and headaches, says Anne Marie Ditto, M.D., an allergist and immunologist at Northwestern University Feinberg School of Medicine in Chicago. The same goes for scented body lotion. Because air is recirculated around the cabin, your fragrance might bother someone rows away. Whether you put it on early in the morning or it's a light floral or musk doesn't matter; some perfumes can linger upward of eight hours. Eau no!

• REALLY BAD!

how bad is it to not know your credit score?

Check your credit standing several times a year—it's not just important if you're applying for a mortgage, "Realizing that your credit score has dropped can tip you off that you've been a victim of identity theft," says Matt Schulz, senior industry analyst at creditcards.com. It's common for crooks to open cards in people's names. When charges go unpaid, your credit rating plummets. FICO, the most popular scoring service, ranges from 300 to 850 in most cases. Each credit reporting bureau (Experian, TransUnion, and Equifax) has a FICO score for you, and it tends to vary a bit, as it's based on what personal info that bureau has. If you're seeking a loan, lenders will check all three. To get free credit reports to examine for unusual activity, visit annualcreditreport.com. Also take a look at your credit card statement, as some list FICO scores.

PRETTY BAD!

how bad is it to pour bacon fat down the drain?

Just don't. While cooking oil of all kinds can result in clogs, bacon grease is particularly good at causing them, says Noah Gavic, a manager at Benjamin Franklin Plumbing, which services the St. Paul-Minneapolis metro area. "People think running hot water as they pour fat down will flush it out, which can work a bit," he says. But the remaining glop will harden as it cools, causing a blockage. If your drain's slow, a store-bought liquid may help; for older pipes, use a gentler enzymatic cleaner. Keep up the drain dumping habit, though, and eventually the pipe will totally plug up. At that point, you'll likely need a pro. Serious cases can require hydro-jetting with high-pressure water, which runs $300 to $500 an hour. Ick. Instead, let the grease harden in the pan; half an hour later. toss the solidified mass in the trash. Wipe the pan with a paper towel, then wash it in the sink.

how bad is it to lie to your doctor about how often you drink?

"Even if a patient doesn't drink excessively no more than two drinks on any single day and no more than seven per week—it's in their best interest to be honest about what they consume," says Anna Lembke, M.D., chief of the Addiction Medicine Dual Diagnosis Clinic at Stanford School of Medicine in California. An evening glass-ofwine habit alone could worsen symptoms in people on antidepressants and impair their alertness. It can contribute to weight gain. too, if that's an issue. Anyone on opioid pain relievers like Vicodin or anti-anxiety meds like Xanax or Valium should avoid alcohol entirely, as mixing the two can lead to serious medical issues, savs Dr. Lembke, Some perspective if you're ashamed to speak up: Docs have seen it all. They're there to help you, not judge you. So, share.

• REALLY BAD!

how bad is it to let your kids eat snow?

Dig in! "Although snow in any area, urban or rural, can contain pollutants, soot, and bacteria, assuming your kids are not eating snow all day, every day, they shouldn't be exposed to anything long enough for there to be any major risks," says Scott Meschke, Ph.D., assistant chair of Environmental and Occupational Health Sciences at the University of Washington. The best dining option is freshly fallen powder: It won't have dirt from the ground mixed in, especially if it's scooped off a raised surface, like a patio table. Still, if your child pops a handful of older snow into her mouth, she should be perfectly fine, says Meschke. Take it from the microbiologist: "My kids have eaten plenty of snow."

hovdyou sleep? reader poli Is seven hours enough? Should you have that midnight snack? Experts chime in on bedtime habitzzz. Do you have a TV in your bedroom? 59% THE EXPERT SAYS Relocate it, or at least binge-watch elsewhere. Watching TV stimulates your brain, hindering your ability to wind down, says Rachel Salas, M.D., a sleep neurologist at Johns Hopkins Medicine in Baltimore, MD. Meanwhile, the brightness pouring out of the screen—known as blue light—mimics the effects of the sun and derails the release of melatonin, the hormone that makes us drowsy. Experts also advise against doing workday activities, including emailing and paying bills, in your bedroom so you don't subconsciously consider it a place to be awake.

What temperature do you usually set your thermostat to overnight?

THE EXPERT SAYS It may be time to adjust the dial: Around 65° is the ideal temperature for snoozing, per the National Sleep Foundation. "When you transition to sleep, your core temperature cools down to signal that it's time to rest," says Dr. Salas. A thermostat set too high affects this natural dip, and you may also end up more restless as you sleep.

How often do you get at least seven hours of sleep?

28%

16%

a few times a week

THE EXPERT SAYS Here's an eye-opener: Although at least seven hours a night is the gold standard, you're doing OK as long as your weekly average is seven hours a night, says Andrew Varga, M.D., a sleep medicine specialist at The Mount Sinai Hospital in New York City. Get less than that and it can impact energy and memory. Adequate sleep is also linked to stronger immunity, a healthy weight, and longevity. Log your hours by wearing a fitness tracker, such as a Fitbit, to bed.

Do you consider yourself a back sleeper. a side sleeper, or a stomach sleeper?

a stomach sleeper

THE EXPERT SAYS Back or side is best, "Sleeping on your stomach, with your face turned to the side, rotates your neck excessively, which can put strain on your neck joints and muscles and can lead to neck aches and pains," says physical therapist Catherine Siengsukon, Ph.D., director of the Sleep, Health and Wellness Lab at the University of Kansas Medical Center in Kansas City. If you tend to get heartburn, lie on your left side; the position prevents stomach acid from bubbling up as you rest. To break a belly habit, sleep on your side with a pillow in front of your stomach to avoid rollovers. Or pick up a pillow designed for stomach sleepers—they're less fluffy. so your neck and spine stay in a more natural position.

When you exercise, is it usually in the morning or the evening?

> 56% the evening

the morning

THE EXPERT SAYS If you need more sleep in your life, do cardio workouts like running early in the morning. In one study, people who did aerobic exercise at 7 a.m. had increased time spent in deep sleep and more of the restorative kind compared with those who worked out at 1 p.m. or 7 p.m. Other research has found that lower heart rate resistance workouts-such as weight lifting and circuits of body weight exercises—are best done in the evening for quality shuteye. But don't sweat the timing too much, says Raj Dasgupta, M.D., a spokesperson for the American Academy of Sleep Medicine: "Exercise at any time expends energy and reduces stress that can keep you up at night."

How much time typically elapses between when you eat dinner and when you go to bed?

66% more than three hours

fewer than three hours

THE EXPERT SAYS Dining within a few hours of bedtime can disrupt sleep. A large meal or one high in fat—like a burger and fries—takes longer to digest, messing with your ability to nod off, says Marie-Pierre St-Onge, Ph.D., associate professor of nutritional medicine at Columbia University Department of Medicine in New York City. For late-night munchies, choose a light bite like cereal and milk, plain popcorn, or yogurt. If you tend to wake up a lot during the night, your Rx may be two kiwis or a glass of tart cherry juice, as both have been shown to increase levels of brain chemicals that facilitate dozing.

Does your bedroom have blackout shades and/or heavily lined curtains?

THE EXPERT SAYS "For optimal sleep, bedrooms should be as dark as possible," says Colleen Ehrnstrom, Ph.D., coauthor of End the Insomnia Struggle. The darker the room, the more melatonin—the sleep-inducing hormone—your body produces, helping you to drift off and snooze deeper. Call it the hotel room effect: People say they sleep better with those industrial-strength curtains. Try hanging room-darkening liners (find 'em at The Home Depot) behind drapes. If you're in the market for window treatments, consider blackout shades (browse blinds.com and smithandnoble.com). Easiest of all: a sleep mask.

When did you last rotate your mattress?

60%

21% within the past

19%

more than six within the pa months ago six months within the past three months

THE EXPERT SAYS Move it! While most mattresses today have pillow or foam tops—and don't need to be flipped—you still want to spin yours 180° about twice a year. It makes for more even wear, which reduces lumps and indents that can compromise comfort, says Dr. Salas. The exception: if you have a hybrid model, such as an Air-Pedic or an Izone, with built-in support for head and neck alignment.

Do you drink caffeinated tea or coffee in the afternoon?

65%

yes

THE EXPERT SAYS While some genetically gifted people can down a latte at night without impairing their sleep, for most of us, it's wise to cut off caffeine by around 3 p.m., says St-Onge. In one study, people who had caffeine six hours before bed got 41 fewer minutes of sleep a night than those who had no caffeine. Decaf, anyone?

Do you keep a glass of water next to your bed?

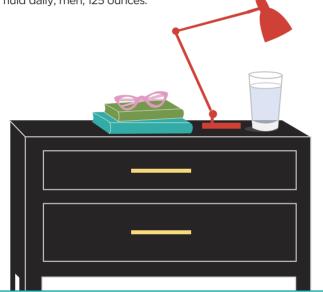

58%

no

THE EXPERT SAYS A bedside drink is a smart call. If you get thirsty, getting up and filling a glass can wake you up too much, especially if it involves a trip to the kitchen. "Opening the fridge floods your eyes with bright light, which can prevent you from falling back to sleep easily," says Alexandre Abreu, M.D., director of the University of Miami UHealth Sleep Center. Stick with just a few sips to avoid a bathroom break later on. If you regularly wake up thirsty, chances are you need more H₂O throughout the day—dehydration also puts you at risk for those dreaded middle-of-the-night calf cramps. Women should aim for a total of about 90 ounces of fluid daily; men, 125 ounces.

THE EXPERT SAYS Good thing most of you can resist. Just like with your TV, the light from your phone puts you in awake mode. "Reaching for your phone can lead to Instagram or emails and work, and then it's tough to turn your brain back off," says Dr. Dasgupta. To end the grab-it habit, leave your phone charging in another room.

THE EXPERT SAYS Expect polyester, feather, and down kinds to last 12 to 18 months before they flatten out; latex, about two years; and memory foam, about three years, says L.A.-based psychologist Michael J. Breus, Ph.D., who specializes in sleep disorders. All bets are off for cheapie pillows, which lack support, says Breus: "The easiest way to turn a $1,500 mattress into a $10 one is to use a $10 pillow."

THE EXPERT SAYS Snoring can be the worst nighttime nuisance, inducing insomnia for unlucky partners (and fantasies about separate bedrooms). The treatment may be simple: side sleeping, or using a mouth guard or nasal strips when stuffiness is an issue. Sometimes, though, snoring is a sign of sleep apnea, says Dr. Abreu. Twenty-two million Americans have the condition, which causes quick pauses in breathing that create fatigue the next day. Heart issues are a risk, so have your partner checked out—a CPAP machine can help. Suffering bedmates can try foam earplugs. Hearos Xtreme Protection earplugs ($27 for 100 pairs, amazon.com) have a high noise-reduction rating.

t has some tough competition, but the HGTV Dream Home 2019 is the dreamiest one yet, says designer Brian Patrick Flynn. First: that Whitefish, MT, location! "It's the most spectacular setting," says Brian. "The house is way up in the mountains with a lake in sight, and it's beautiful year-round in summer there's lush greenery everywhere, in fall it's striking reds and vellows, and in winter everything's blanketed in snowy white." Second: that design! Brian gave the newly built house a forest-inspired palette—lots of deep greens, spicy oranges, fiery reds, and, of course, warm wood finishes run throughout the approximately 3,650-square-foot three-bedroom home. A wide-open layout and giant windows make the space feel as airy as the great outdoors. The vibe is part luxe ski resort, part passed-down-through-thegenerations-vet-updated family cabin. All in all, it's pretty enchanting: "The inside was made to feel exceptionally warm, cozy, and dreamy," says Brian, "because in the end, it's all about coming here to relax, sit back, and enjoy the beautiful view."

ಾ great room ೯

What better way to merge outside and in than with a wall of windows two stories tall? Brian played up the cathedral ceiling with a rugged-chic brass and iron chandelier from wayfair.com that stretches more than 4 feet in diameter. Gathering around the metal-clad fireplace is irresistible—there's a comfy sectional and a pair of leather armchairs plus cool cowhide X-benches, all from wayfair.com, grounded by a colorful rug by Continental Rug Company. The resident faux-moose is a custom upholstered creation by Faraway Lovely.

"There's such an incredible view, I had to put a picture window in the middle of the shower—the first time I've done that," says Brian. "No worries, no one will see you but the caribou!" For spa-like surroundings, Brian chose slate-color porcelain tile by Akdo in the shower, a Carrara marble-topped vanity, and mossy green-gray on the walls and part of the ceiling (Shade-Grown by HGTV HOME by Sherwin-Williams). Rough-hewn reclaimed wood on the rest of the ceiling adds a rustic touch.

It's picture-perfect and chill-perfect, too—the area looks right out onto Whitefish Lake and the surrounding forest. Weatherproof wicker sofas with navy blue cushions from Birch Lane flank the majestic woodburning fireplace from Belgard, with complementary gray pavers by Trex. Instead of one giant coffee table, Brian chose two concrete ones by Williston Forge so they can be split up for entertaining. This spot is just as heavenly for family time, says Brian: "You could stare at the scenery and talk all day long."

Kathryn and Gib with Reece, 12, and Rye, 9

hv use a few colors when you can use all of them? That's been Kathryn O'Neal-Dunham's motto for as long as she can remember. As a kid she dressed herself in rainbow tights and candycolor tops. After she got her own apartment in her 20s, one of her first purchases was a wood table with four chairs painted red, yellow. lime green, and blue. "I grew up in Oklahoma, where we're not afraid of color," she says. Three years ago, she and her husband, Gib, bought an 1850s farmhouse in Irvington, NY, and did a big renovation—new kitchen, new bathrooms, new pipes and wiring, plus an addition. Kathryn knew the risk of going color overboard was real, so she brought in designer Denise Davies to temper her wildest instincts. They filled the house with punches of color and pattern. balancing each room with neutrals in furniture, tile, and the walls. "It never seems like too much," says Kathryn. "It just always feels happy."

NOOK To keep the casual-cool vibe going, Denise had shades made with a green abstract floral fabric by Hable Construction. The family eats most of their meals at the round Saarinen table, so, like the counter stool seats, the cushions on the Eames chairs (also Hable Construction fabric) are laminated to shield against sauce, juice, and markers. Kathryn stumbled upon the big bubble light fixture, by Oly, online and bought it immediately. "I like lights with attitude," she says.

guest bedroom When the door to this room is open, everyone walking up the stairs can see inside. That's why Kathryn wanted it to be extra cute. A small-scale floral wallpaper and a white bed, both by Serena & Lily, and a dotted fabric by Hable Construction for the curtains make the sweetest combination. Denise found the vintage painting, which introduced a hit of orange to the room, and they matched some of the bedding to it. The nightstand and yellow lamp are from West Elm.

master bathroom Kathryn went for an Old Paris vibe here, inspired by a claw-foot tub original to the house. Denise had the Restoration Hardware vanity painted a luxe blue (try Dark Navy by Behr) and paired it with brass—mirrors by Restoration Hardware, drawer pulls from ModShop, and faucets and sconces by Rejuvenation. The rug is from overstock.com.

laundry room Not only are the cabinets painted a minty fresh hue (Leisure Green by Benjamin Moore) but all the trim is, too. A span of graphic yellow wallpaper by Given Campbell makes a big statement. Combined with the retroesque penny tile on the floor, "it's the happiest little room," says Kathryn. The family's rescue dog, Mellie, gets a bit freaked out by the sound of the washer and dryer, but when they're not in use, she'll venture in for a treat from the jar on the counter.

Stephanie and Eric with Ellie, 8

tephanie and Eric Baker always knew they'd have to redo the kitchen of the 1974 ranch they bought in 2016 in Greer, SC. "It felt like a dungeon," says Stephanie. Since adding square footage would cost big bucks, they postponed the project for a year to save up. Meanwhile they hired local designer Amanda Louise Campbell to help make over other parts of the house and were thrilled when she said she could give them their dream kitchen without increasing the size of the room. To create a highly functional space, she tore out cabinetry (see ya, floor-hogging peninsula) and reconfigured the layout for an island. Then she added lots of storage spots and pep, including patterned tile, glam lighting, and cheery blue-green paint. As promised, not a single wall was sledgehammered. "The new look makes it feel twice as big!" says Stephanie. "I can't believe it's still the same size."

ENJOY BREATHTAKING VIEWS OF THE NORTHERN ROCKY MOUNTAINS

AT THE HGTV® DREAM HOME 2019, located in Whitefish, MT, a cozy resort town at the edge of Glacier National Park. Interior designer Brian Patrick Flynn fused a combination of stained wood, shades of bronze, and a palette of rust tones, sky blues, and rich mossy greens seen throughout nature to create a one-of-a-kind modern mountain masterpiece.

ONE-HOUR SPECIAL AIRS JANUARY 18/7 C

GREAT ROOM

This room delivers a warm welcome with colors from the HGTV HOME™ by Sherwin-Williams Timeless Beauty Collection. The color Chatroom covers the walls and ceilings and matches custom sheer drapes to frame the view. Adding to the warmth is the seating area surrounding the focal fireplace, including an L-shaped sofa and plush pillows in cozy textures and patterns—all from Wayfair. The conversation starter is a faux moose head upholstered in a signature Northwest Pendleton pattern. Overhead is an oversize bronze chandelier that grounds the space and diffuses light throughout. A wireless security system and camera from SimpliSafe provide peace of mind.

KITCHEN

The large eat-in kitchen has a center island perfect for drinking in the view with morning coffee. Two contrasting tones of cabinet finishes, both from Cabinets to Go, feature iron hardware and are balanced by the stainless steel gourmet appliances and concrete and metallic countertops. The trio of rustic iron sconces beautifully blend into the gray and black tones. The finishing touches include two sculptural-looking fixtures from Delta Faucet and accessories in deep shades of blue for a consistent color scheme throughout the first floor.

DINING ROOM

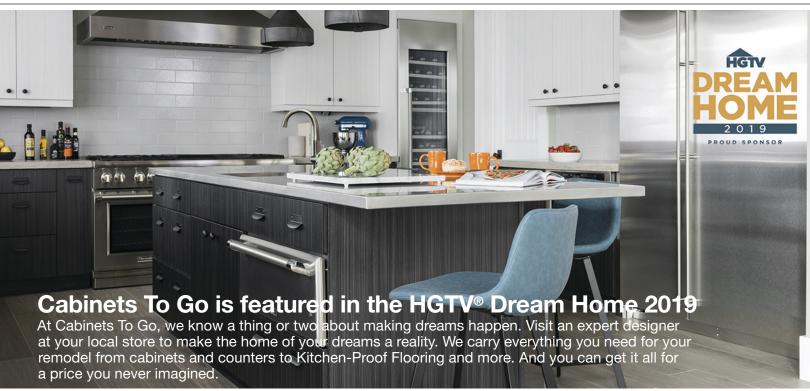

Serving as a transition between the kitchen and the living room is a neutral tone-on-tone dining room with furnishings from Wayfair. A gray hair-on-hide rug in a checkerboard pattern defines the space. Traditional-style armless upholstered chairs surround the dining table, which features die-cast legs and a rich metal top. A pair of resin antler chandeliers hang from the ceiling, which is covered in reclaimed wood for a nod to classic western style that really brings home the Montana cabin look.

PET NOOK

The area below the main staircase serves as its own retreat for four-legged friends. The space incorporates a small dog sofa and stylish storage for all pet care items such as CESAR® Canine Cuisine and treats.

OUTDOOR LIVING ROOM AND PATIO

An elevated outdoor living room decked with a very rich shade of brown Trex® offers some of the best views looking down directly at the teal-colored lake. This space is covered by a tongue-in-groove ceiling stained in a shade of brown by Cabot® and lit with three farmhouse-style barrel chandeliers. A staircase leads down to a patio with a custom built-in seating wall and fireplace, both constructed with Belgard® pavers, for another area where you can enjoy a view that will take your breath away.

LOFT AND LODGE

The great room stairwell leads up to a bonus multipurpose space. The bunk loft has a twin over a full bunk bed with a Sleep Number mattress on the lower bunk for guests' comfort, all set on dreamy wide-plank Canterbury Hickory flooring by Lumber Liquidators. Above the top bunk is a collection of layered cowboy hats that form a straw sculpture. The lodge area is designed for working out with two Peloton pieces, a tread and a bike, to keep you up with the active skiing lifestyle in Whitefish. Soft white cork flooring from Lumber Liquidators in the bonus space, featuring sound absorption, is comfortable to walk on without the need for an area rug.
